PHILADELPHIA, APRIL 12, 1823.

WHOLE No. 89.

Vol. II.—No. 15.

Published by ATKINSON & ALEXANDER, No. 53 Market street, north side, four doors below Second street, at $2 per annum, payable half yearly in advance, or $3 at the end of the year.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

TO SATISFY.

Oh thou, whose gimblet eye can pierce the soul,
Whose voice, whose looks e'en folly can control;
Whose thundering accents ringing in the ear,
Can make the self-determined deaf man hear;
Before whose face the scold will silence keep,
The immodest man will blush, the unfeeling turn
and weep;
Often, where Charity in vain hath prayed
To the cold heart of Avarice, for aid,
Thou hast unlocked his stores, more has he given,
For fear of thee, than he would give for heaven:
Oft from hypocrisy thy hand hath torn,
The goody character that he had worn,
And to the opened eyes of men revealed,
The innate wickedness he had concealed:
Oh! this is satire as it ought to be,
Firm in its judgments and from passions free;
But there are satirists who only see
The face, and not the soul's deformity;
Thus if these writers criticize, they scan,
Not if the author executes his plan.
Not if fair Genius o'er his labours smile,
With wisdom's fruit to cheer, while its bright
flowers beguile;
No they still turn their sharp unwearied eye,
To find some term uncouth, or word awry;
On this they work their pens, and sometimes make
A dose that may the author's calmness break;
But such a dose ne'er does the patient good,
It only tends to hatred and ill blood. P. P. P.

AN EPISTLE OF TENDER CAUTION Against stumbling at the Faults of others.

It has been the work of the restless adversary of human happiness in all ages of the world, to strive to keep man in, or bring him into darkness. Those who are in it he strives to keep in it; and those who have been redeemed in some degree from it, he strives to captivate and beguile into it again; and his design in both, is to prevent the enjoyment of the sweet flowings of the love of God, and the powerful communication of the Holy Ghost. For he knows that these enjoyments are only witnessed in the light. He also knows the light would shine, and even prevail to the letting the soul into the full fruition of those divine enjoyments, if he did not with all his might, strive to propagate the kingdom and power of darkness in and over people's minds.

Now the strategem he makes use of are many and diverse; one of which, and that not the least, it has been pressing on my mind to write a few lines upon, by way of caution to such as are desirous to land safe at last, in the mansions of undisturbed felicity; but it feels or has felt difficult to express my mind, so as to have my words go to the right place, and do good. I have no desire to write one word on this occasion, but what may be of use, and tend to strengthen those desires and strivings, which the Lord of hosts delights in, and which as they prevail, his blessing is unto. Therefore, I desire that all prejudice may be laid aside, and my words weighed in that balance that ever is accompanied with a just weight; and tried by that ear that trieth words, as the mouth tastes meat. I know the subtlety of Satan is such that he will be apt to supply the carping mind with materials to overthrow the force of all the persuasions and arguments and exhortations that the sincerest goodwill can dictate, or the greatest yearnings of bowels, and travail of spirit for the welfare of souls, inspire. However, if the Lord shall please to impress the following on any mind to advantage, to Him be the praise; if not, with him I leave it.

The particular snare of the adversary, that my mind is engaged to guard, caution, and encourage against; is this, stumbling at the failings of others. A potent engine, a powerful instrument which prevails by Satan's influence to the weakening the faith of many. Alas! alas! why will a spirit bound to eternity, stumble over the failings of flesh and blood? Why will a soul, that must finally settle accounts between God and itself, spend time, waste time, to muse and despond at the infirmities of another? The frailties of a thousand, cannot impair the unchangeable Truth and righteousness of Jehovah. The hypocrisy of ten thousands cannot deprive the faithful, persevering soul, of the all-sufficient assistance of the mighty God of Jacob. It is an everlasting truth, that there is a right way to serve God; and tho' a multitude fall on the right hand; and an host of those who have been as stars in the firmament, revolt on the left—yet the wayfarer man, tho' a fool, cannot err in that way which the Lord hath cast up for the ransomed to walk in. We are told that the dragon's tail drew a third part of the very stars from heaven. Was this told, to stumble us? Surely nay;—but still the cry is, Come up hither, and I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. Now the stumblers may say, "I have strove to see the bride, I have thought I had seen her. I have viewed her, and her beauty fades away; her brightness disappears." But, mark well, the call is "Come up hither, and I will show thee." It is not while we stand gazing at imperfections, and reasoning upon faults, that we must expect this divine prospect. No, no. But come up hither, and I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. This come up hither, imports something very different from that of halting, lingering behind, as it were, sticking in the mire, which my soul has truly mourned over and lamented.

I think I am a living witness, and can testify that there are some who have long ago been kindly visited, and tenderly invited them?) are feeding on serpent's food; which was denounced by the lip of Truth to be dust, and that all the days of his life. And I also declare, under a feeling sense of Divine authority, that nothing better shall be the food, to all eternity, of such as spend all the days of their lives in gazing at, or stumbling over the failings of others. But I mean not to censure. 'Tis their immortal souls' welfare I have in view; therefore, I would call them; yea, beseech, and intreat them, as they tender their own salvation, to come away,—come away. This is not your rest. It surely is polluted. It is a land of darkness, as darkness itself: the shadows of the evening, yea the shadows of midnight are spread over the minds of the inhabitants thereof. Oh, sorrowful! sorrowful! that any should love to dwell in utter darkness! that any should suffer their immortal souls to be made so easy a prey to the Dragon. What will it avail thee, O soul, when thou comest before the great and final tribunal, to say such a man professed great sanctity, but was an hypocrite; therefore I was tempted to quit the service of the living God, and serve his enemy? Or, such a one made profession of exalted piety, but was a liar, a deceiver, an abominable wretch: therefore, I was somewhat washed, I turned to my wallowing in the mire. This will never justify thee at the gates of heaven, nor procure thee an admittance thereunto. Oh! my soul mourns on thy account. My spirit is indeed grieved. Come, let me query with thee—Dost thou feel a daily striving to overcome evil in thyself? Art thou constantly concerned to keep up the inward watch and holy warfare? Yea, let me come closer: Whilst thou art dwelling, musing, and feeding upon the faults of others, art thou at the same time engaged, and panting after perfection in thy own soul? While thou art rehearsing to thy intimate friend, the wanderings and weaknesses of such and such, dost thou feel longing, and unquenchable desires in thy mind, to make war in righteousness against the power of corruption in thyself? If not, the enemy of Truth, it is to be feared, may with justice, challenge the praise due from thy complainings. Oh! that that eye was open in thee, that could see thyself. Oh! that thou hadst a heart to understand this mystery of iniquity. But alas! the adversary blinds thee. For why dost thou give back, because of another's weakness, but because of thine own? Why stumbllest thou at another's frailties, but because thyself art frail? Make a pause then,—and turn thy attention inward. Set a watch upon the wicked of thy soul, and keep centinel in deep attention there; then wilt thou have enough to do to view thy own imperfections, and to guard against them, so as not to stumble others. Work enough indeed may be found to engage all thy care and diligence, in laboring to cease from evil and do good thyself.

It is less substantial than many a dream, to give the victory over our own souls to our enemy, because others are entangled in his snares. Shall I quit the field, and turn my back in the day of battle, because a fellow-soldier is treacherous, cowardly, or unfaithful, when I know my all is at stake, and if I flee, I must perish? Surely nay. I ought rather to put forward with more zeal, vigilance and constancy; endeavoring to encourage the fearful and unbelieving; as knowing the salvation of their souls, as well as my own, is at stake. Away then, thou reasoner! thou murmurer! with such pitiful musings and excuses. The day of solemn reckoning draws near. Thou must ere long, appear before the Ancient of Days, to give an account of the deeds done in thy frail, mortal body; and to receive a reward according to thy works; not according to the stability of another. Therefore, awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, that Christ may give thee light. For darkness, gross darkness, is the encircling, overshadowing canopy of thy soul. It is time for thee to hear and obey the command given to Israel of old;—to go forward;—for thou (with them) hast compassed this mountain long enough;—a barren mountain, in the wide, desolate wilderness; from the top of which, it is much to be feared, thou mayest one day (or rather night) by the arising of a strong and boisterous whirlwind, be swept off into the bottomless pit of despair; or into some quagmire, or swampy hole, where serpents, reptiles and venomous creatures breed and dwell. Oh! that I could persuade thee, for thy own soul's sake, to turn thy back on Satan's suggestions. Oh! that thou could be prevailed upon to lift up thy head above the world, that so thy salvation might draw nigh indeed.

Now to conclude, let me once more beseech thee to hearken to that encouraging invitation, which is sometimes sounded in the secret of thy soul, "Come up hither, and I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." Come up, is here the joyful sound; and even the spirit and the bride say Come; and indeed he that will come, may come: yea verily, may come: and if he improves the strength given, all the powers of earth, and of the infernal hosts, cannot hinder him. For there is no enchantment against shalt thou walk in the light of the Lord; his candle shall shine upon thee, and his inspeaking word shall guide thee in the way everlasting. Walking in which, with fullness of peace, I desire to leave thee, and rest thy friend. JOB SCOTT.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Although we cannot by the exercise of human reason lay open the plans and decrees of the Deity, or investigate the hidden system by which he rules the natural and moral worlds, yet we may, without incurring the charge of impiety or presumption, account for many things upon principles of reason and philosophy, which have often been superstitiously ascribed to Divine agency. Phenomena from natural cause have frequently been taken for omens and prodigies, and astonishment and terror have been excited by the appearance of things simple in themselves; natural effects following a natural cause. Faith in the doctrine of signs and omens, have destroyed the happiness, and poisoned the cup of life in many an honest mind—the accidental breaking of a glass—an unusual strange noise, or an uncommon but idle dream, has often filled the mind with painful forebodings and been considered as the premonitory sign of death, or some dismal destiny. An eclipse in old times would throw whole nations of people into consternation, and the appearance of a comet excited terror and dismay, and was regarded as the messenger of Divine wrath. Those things now are familiarized to the understanding, and their causes are laid open by the researches of human reason. Ignorance and superstition have, in a great measure, surrendered their empire over the human intellect, and science and the diffusion of knowledge, like the rays of the sun, are scattering away the mists of error that once involved the human mind in darkness. The trammels which the unguarded hand of education has imposed upon us are hard to shake off, and the wrong impression received in infancy can rarely be effaced by any sober maxims in maturer age. Who that has been once terrified by bugbear stories of raw head and bloody bones, of apparitions of the dead, &c. can ever after, with perfect self-possession, face the scenes where these are said to hold their nocturnal vigils. Parents who have the happiness of their offspring at heart, cannot be too watchful over their infant minds, to guard against the introduction of error and falsehood. Evil, in the germ, may be easily checked, but if suffered to shoot into luxuriant growth is rarely to be controlled. Our common conversation should, therefore, be very guarded, lest we inadvertently instil into the young and tender mind improper ideas. The absurd doctrines of ghosts and omens should never be countenanced in the presence of children, and due care should be taken how we ascribe certain evils to the Divine agency. Evils and calamities fall to our lot accordingly to the common course of things, and if the proximate cause is not immediately visible, some ignorantly imagine them to be the effect of Divine vengeance, which is a principle as false at that which Jesus Christ condemned in those who told of the Galileans massacred by Pontius Pilate.

The Ladies' Friend.

MATRIMONY has its advocates and its enemies—after all it's a good thing, if not abused. True you may stumble upon a bad partner, and that will be bad enough, but you may meet with misfortunes in any course of life—the world is full of them—the best possible rule is, if you want to make a good wife—be a good husband. If you would have an indulgent husband, be a tender, forbearing and affectionate wife. In more than half the cases of unhappy matches the truth is, that there is much fault on both sides. There is a maxim in common life, "mend your own manners, and your neighbours will mend theirs."—It applies to matrimony as well as to intercourse in general.

THE GOOD WIFE.

The good wife is one, who, ever mindful of the solemn contract which she has entered into, is strictly and conscientiously virtuous, constant and faithful to her husband; chaste, pure and unblemished in every thought, word and deed; she is humble and modest, from reason and conviction; submissive from choice, and obedient from inclination; what she acquires by love and tenderness, she preserves by prudence and discretion; she makes her husband's service, and her pleasure to oblige her husband; as conscious that every thing which promotes his happiness must in the end and eateth not the bread of idleness: her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her. Lastly, as a good and pious Christian, she looks up with an eye of gratitude to the great dispenser and disposer of all things, to the husband of the widow, and father of the fatherless, intreating his divine favour and assistance in this and every other moral and religious duty; well satisfied, that if she duly and punctually discharge her several offices and relations in this life, she shall be blessed and rewarded for it in another.

THE GOOD HUSBAND.

The good husband is one, who wedded not by interest but by choice, is constant as well from inclination as from principle; he treats his wife with delicacy as a woman, with tenderness as a friend; he attributes her follies to her weakness, her imprudence to her inactivity; he passes them over therefore with good nature, and pardons them with indulgence: all his care and industry are employed for her welfare; all his strength and powers are exerted for her support and protection; he is more anxious to preserve his own character and reputation, because her's is blended with it; lastly, the good husband is pious and religious, that he may animate her faith by his practice, and enforce the precepts of Christianity by his own example; that as they join to promote each other's happiness in this world, they may unite together in one eternal joy and felicity in that which is to come.

COLLECTANEA.

THE PET LAMB.

In the first settling of Nottingham, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, a family had raised a lamb, in and about the house, which became the play fellow of their daughter, then about three or four years of age. One day, while the parents were too busy to be very attentive to the child, she and the lamb strayed into the woods and were lost. After some time the family and neighborhood were alarmed, and went in search of them, but for many hours to no purpose, their anxiety being greatly increased, by the frequent howling of the wolves which were then very numerous; at length the child was found asleep and unhurt, and near it some of the bones of the lamb. She told them, that the naughty dogs, meaning the wolves, had killed and eaten the lamb. The woman, whose life, when a child, was thus providentially saved, died about the year 1797, in the same neighborhood where she had always resided.

"I forgot it," said Sam Shambles to his customer whom he had promised a round of beef for dinner—"I forgot it."—What could be said more? the man had to go without his dinner but he changed his custom. I forgot it, says the man who has promised to pay a bill on a certain day—the creditor was disappointed, but nothing could be done, the man forgot it. I forgot it, says the mechanic who has neglected a piece of work that ought to have been done, I forgot it. Heaven preserve us from these forgetful fellows—they turn all our calculations upside down, and make us as unfaithful to our promises as they are themselves. But hark ye! you have no business to make a promise if you can't remember to fulfil it. Please to bear that in mind—for people ought not to suffer for your carelessness.

A GOOD CHARACTER is, to a young man, what a firm foundation is to the artist who purposes to erect a dwelling on it, he can build with safety, and as all who behold it will have confidence in its solidity, a helping hand will never be wanted. But let a single part of this be defective and you must go on at a hazard, amid doubtings and distrust, and ten to one but it will tumble down at last and mangle all that was built on it in ruins. Without a good character, poverty is a curse—with it, it is scarcely an evil. Happiness cannot exist where good character is not; where it is, it always is a frequent visitor if not a constant guest. All that is bright in the hope of youth; all that is calm and blissful in the sober scenes of life; all that is soothing in the vale of years, centres in, and is derived from a good character. Therefore acquire this, as the first and most valuable earthly good.

COMMUNICATION.

I have perused most of the periodical publications now in circulation among us, and none of them, in my humble opinion, appear to contain so much simple fact, and plain truth, as a religious work called "The Reformer." Nothing but what is authenticated and founded on truth and sound reason is admitted into its columns: no dry, uninteresting disquisitions, relative to the whys, who's, wherefore's of sectarian animosities, and predilections: no speculative opinions, in order to support any particular sect, or party, or to build up the kingdom of Anti-Christ, all of which only tend to engender strife, and hinder the promulgation of the Everlasting truth, as it is in Jesus.

I have attentively perused all the numbers of said little useful work, from the 1st of January, 1820, to the present month, and I would recommend the perusal of them to all serious enquiring minds, who wish to have correct views of the present degenerate and retrograde state of Christendom.

"THE OLIO" THE VERY BEST OF LIFE,
THAT GIVES IT ALL ITS FLAVOUR.

Epitaph on an old Fisherman.
His net old fisher George long drew,
Shoals upon shoals he caught,
Till death came hauling for his due,
And made poor George his draught.
Death fishes on thro' various shades,
In vain it is to fret,
Nor fish nor fisherman escapes
Death's all enclosing net.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Pittsburgh, Pa. March 27.

Messrs. Editors.—I calculate upon your reception of this effusion, and obtrusion upon your day's avocations, to become confounded and astonished at my rustic notions of good living.

You must know, Messrs. Editors, that I am in the habit of weekly perusing your interesting and amusing paper, edited by you, called the "Saturday Evening Post," but some time has elapsed, since I had the pleasure of reading an article denominated an "enigmatical dinner." Week after week have imperceptibly passed away in pleasing anticipations of having the infinite gratification of possessing the solution of the three different courses named.

This delusion, I now affirm has vanished, and I do entertain a strong presentiment, that your word to the public genius and correspondent had set the plagiarist, and culled from various sources, those different appellations, descriptive of an ambiguous epicurean redundancy, fondly flattering his periphrastic incapacity, that he should either cramp the genius of some, and excite the imitation of others, and by that stratagem elicit what he could not fathom himself, namely the exact denomination of the different articles which would constitute the entertainment proposed for solution.

Now, no longer expecting to be gratified from a Philadelphia channel, and finding that a number of my female friends of this delectable Pitt, whose curiosity have arisen to the highest summit of Grants-Hill's expectation and anxiety, I was determined to exercise my inquisitive faculty, and furnish you, and through you, the Philadelphia gentry, what I humbly apprehend to be the compound of the heterogeneous mass, calculated to gratify the optics, olfactory sensibility, and sensuality of an epicurean appetite.

With the utmost deference, I have forwarded the result.—Respectfully,

MATILDA COAL-HILL.

Grants-Hill, commands great notoriety by every traveller that visits Pittsburgh, and affords a constant promenade for the inhabitants; the prospects from this eminence gives you an extensive picturesque and delightful scenery of the City of Pitt, and surrounding country.

A. ATKINSON'S

Superior Patent Spring Riding Saddles and Patent Laporte Bridles, HAVING purchased of JOHN J. MORRIS, of the city of New-York, the sole and entire right of making and vending his newly invented SPRING SEAT and SPRING POINT SADDLES within the city and county of Philadelphia, offers them for sale.

At his Saddle and Harness Manufactory, No. 5 North Fifth street. Gentlemen are respectfully invited to call and see the principle on which they are constructed. Nearly two years' trial of the above Saddles in New-York, has rendered comments unnecessary. The Laporte Bridles are constructed in such a manner as to curb the most vicious Horse without injuring him, and with perfect ease and safety to the rider. They are well adapted for Ladies persons not in the practice of riding, as it gives them full power over their Horses in cases of emergency. They can also be applied to Harness of every description. Also, for sale, an assortment of STEEL and PLATED BITS and STIRRUPS.

N. B. Gentlemen can be accommodated with Spring Saddles for trial, if required.

Returning to England.

JOHN OLDRIDGE, begs leave to acquaint his friends and the public, that on account of the great demand for the Balm of Gilead, in Great Britain, and particular family affairs, he intends taking his departure, with his family, in a few months, from Philadelphia, and therefore thinks it his duty to inform his patrons, that it would be well for them to lay in a stock of his BALM for family use, as he does not intend to leave an Agent in the United States.

Its utility as a preventative for the falling off and restoring of hair is universally allowed and approved by thousands who have used, or seen it tried; therefore it is unnecessary to enter into a long detail of its other virtues. It is now made nearly colourless, and still retains its former virtues. It is prepared and sold, as usual, at his establishments, No. 553 South Front street, and at No. 11 North Fourth street, Philadelphia, at one dollar per bottle, and 50 cents for a half bottle. Good allowance to those who purchase quantities.
